DETAILED ACTION

1. Applicant's response to election requirement of March 23, 2005 is acknowledged. Elected claims 36-38 represent a different species from the other elected claims and therefore will not be considered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

3. Claims 1, 3, 6, 9, 18, 20, and 31-34 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Clark (US Patent 5,375,768).

Clark '768 shows a sprinkler comprising a riser 16, a nozzle, means for mounting the nozzle as recited, a turbine 56, a drive means as recited, and means for preventing over-spinning of the turbine when the pressurized fluid is air or a mixture of water and air wherein the over-spinning prevention means includes a valve 62 for selectively re-directing the fluid around the turbine as recited in claim 3. Regarding claim 31, the valve of the speed control mechanism is fully capable of limiting the rotational speed of the turbine when the incoming fluid is compressed air since the valve opening amount is based on fluid pressure. Although Clark discloses the valve opening under water pressure, the valve would open the same if the fluid was air under the same pressure. Under normal operating conditions, the incoming fluid would be water, and the valve would have no effect on the rotational speed when the water is under normal pressures.

Art Unit: 3752

The only time the incoming fluid would be compressed air is during the process of "winterizing" the sprinkler by blowing out any remaining water in the sprinkler at higher pressures.
